SOC01. Cajal Club Social

Location: Marriott Marquis San Diego Marina: Grand Ballroom 8

Time: Sunday, November 13, 2016, 6:45 PM - 8:45 PM

Informal socializing with presentations of a few awards to neuroscientists at senior, mid, and early career stages. This will be followed by two short, informal presentations on the question of genomic variability and instability in neurons by Kristin Baldwin and Michael McConnell, two leading scientists in this area. An interactive discussion will follow.

SOC04. Cognitive Neuroscience Social

Location: Marriott Marquis San Diego Marina: Grand Ballroom 12

Time: Sunday, November 13, 2016, 6:45 PM - 8:45 PM

"The Art of Storytelling"

This year's Cognitive Neuroscience Social will celebrate the art of storytelling, featuring true stories by scientists sharing their unique perspective on science. Everyone has a story to tell, whether it's about starting out in science, a challenge, an exciting discovery or an epic failure. Come listen to — and be inspired by — the stories of four scientists who are also storytellers: Wendy Suzuki, Stuart Firestein, Rebecca Brachmann, and André Fenton. Join us for drinks and snacks, and share your own stories with your colleagues.

SOC07. Itch Social

Location: Marriott Marquis San Diego Marina: Torrey Pines 1 and 2

Time: Sunday, November 13, 2016, 6:45 PM - 8:45 PM

"Scratching the Itch"

This purely social event brings together neuroscientists with a common interest in itch research. The itch is the least understood of the somatic senses, but recent work has identified novel transduction molecules, spinal circuitry, ascending pathways, and a matrix of brain areas active during itch. The aim of this inaugural Itch Social is to provide an opportunity for researchers to meet old and new colleagues with a common interest in itch and pain, and to network and learn about other itch-related organizations and funding opportunities.
